II Writing and reading good thoughts II

Title of the exercise:- Writing and reading good thoughts

Objective:- A person behaves according to the thoughts that arise in his mind. Good thoughts inspire a person to do good work. By doing good work, a person takes his society and nation on the path of progress. Good thoughts create a fear-free environment and knowledge in the mind.

Through the good thoughts and self-experienced statements of great men, a good environment is created in the minds of students, which transmits positive energy in the students.

Concept: - Late Daran Bai Taram Government College Gurur has Hindi Department at Graduate level

Hindi language is taught in B.A., B.Sc., B.Com. and Hindi literature is taught in B.A. Before teaching, students express and explain the thoughts of great men and their own good thoughts in the class and record them in the register. Students listen to the good thoughts carefully and try to implement them.

Whether the good thoughts are written or narrated by great men or by oneself, its purpose matters the most. But if this initiative is for college students, it becomes even more important.

That is because student life is the best period for character and personality development. Whether the tradition is of good thoughts narrated by great men or of self-made sayings, the common purpose of both is to pave an excellent direction for personality development.

The effective result of writing and reading good thoughts is meaningful only when their impact is reflected on one's own character and ideological activities. The purpose of writing and reading good thoughts is to instigate a thought revolution among college students.

Through which students, along with studying their subject, keep moving forward in the direction of their planned goal by being inspired by good thoughts. Good thoughts directly affect our mental attitude, due to which the student is forced to think that the thoughts that I am creating will be meaningful and effective for others only when I first realize these good thoughts in myself.

This initiative among college students is also important because somewhere along with taking admission in college, the students develop a maturity of ideological understanding and a feeling of responsibility towards themselves as well as the country and society.

During the college education period, students definitely understand that this country, this society and this family have given us a lot, now it is our turn to see what we can give to our country, society and family.

The initiative of writing and reading good thoughts can inspire the college students to do something for the nation and society and to become something and for personal development.

All that is needed is to convert the good thoughts that we read in sentences through pen and books into reality.

Evidence of success: - Improvement in character and conduct of students through good thought writing and recitation Change is being seen, the students of the college are trying to mold themselves according to the ideas which is clearly reflected in their thoughts and behavior.

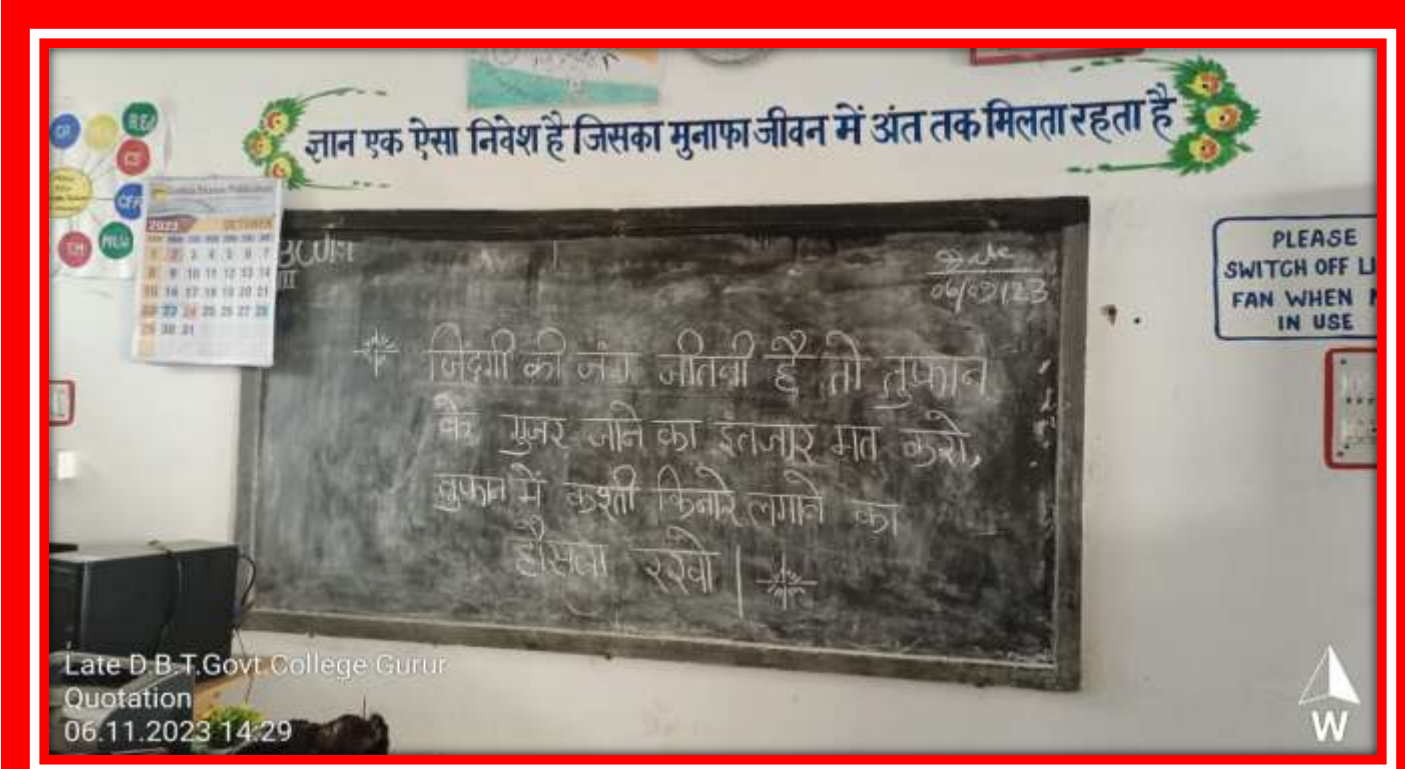

In fact, good thoughts are such a medium through which students can be guided towards excellent character building and good path.
